Curricula	1. Methods and Technologies for Environmental Monitoring and Protection 1. Analysis and prevention of natural risks (seismic and landslide risks) 2. Industrial Engineering and Information Technologies
Aims and topics	The IISS PhD program aims to provide the doctoral students with strong scientific basis, and to help them in developing the ability to carry out pure and applied research, as well as to contribute to the elaboration and implementation of innovative, efficient, eco-compatible and socially sustainable development models. The students will acquire special skills in one of the following areas: methods and strategies for monitoring, protection and sustainability of the environment; methods of analysis of natural hazard (in particular seismic and landslide) and risk mitigation; management of raw materials, energy systems and industrial production; territorial planning, methods and systems for the processing and transmission of information. Furthermore, they are expected to acquire transversal skills in the field of sensors, modelling and analysis of complex interacting systems and of technologies of general interest. The doctoral students are also formed to be able to operate in high education sectors, as well as to carry out highly qualified activities related to research, development and management in private companies and public institutions and entities. The three curricula include activities consistent with the objectives of the National Recovery and Resilience Plan (PNRR). Curriculum "Methods and Technologies for Environmental Monitoring and Protection":  Topics: Sensors and sensing technologies of environmental parameters; Integration and analysis of environmental data; Modelling monitoring, protection and preservation of the environment; Development of strategies and actions for prevention and resolution of environmental problems; Energy saving and distributed micro-generation; Data processing and applications with particular reference to COPERNICUS for environmental monitoring  The curriculum aims to train researchers with a high scientific qualification level able to understand, apply and develop innovation in the fields of: (a) investigation methodologies, (b) analysis and modelling of environmental problems, (c) mathematical models for the scenarios development in the territorial planning as well as in the risk analysis and prevention areas, (d) sensors and also (e) the adoption and development of interventions strategies aimed at their prevention, mitigation and resolution. Moreover, attention is paid to the economic aspects of sustainable development issues, mainly concerning both social and environmental reporting themes, also in the form of integrated reports as well as the management and policy of the agri-food system. A further focus deals with the theme of the sustainable business model, from both the public and private sector perspective. Curriculum "Analysis and prevention of natural risks (seismic and landslide risks)":  Topics: Numerical and experimental approaches for the assessment of seismic vulnerability of structures; Methods and techniques for the mitigation and management of seismic risk; Theoretical and experimental analyses of geotechnical problems; Slope stability and landslide risk reduction; Non-linear analysis of structures; Data processing and applications with particular reference to COPERNICUS for environmental monitoring.  The curriculum aims to provide the doctoral students with the skills for operating in the fields of seismic and hydrogeological risks (for the latter, in particular, landslide risk), structural engineering, and geotechnical engineering. Strong physical-mathematical basis and knowledge of fundamental seismology are required. The students are supposed to

	acquire deep knowledge of: structural engineering, seismic engineering, geotechnical and foundation engineering, slope stability, all the types of monitoring systems, evaluation and mitigation of landslide and seismic risks (from the single construction or single slope scale to large areas scale). Within these subjects, original and innovative research must be developed, possibly in the view of green and sustainable solutions. Curriculum "Industrial Engineering and Information Technologies":  Topics: Mechanical engineering design and applied mechanics, Mechanical technologies and industrial plants, Energy conversion systems, Engineering Thermodynamics and fluid flow machinery, Electromagnetism, Devices and systems for telecommunications, Automation and Mechatronics, Applied Physics.  The research project aims to train valuable researchers that are capable of proposing innovative approaches and strategies for the development of efficient and sustainable energy, propulsion and industrial production systems, as well as developing methodologies and technologies suitable to create and integrate highly complex interacting systems. Particular attention is paid to the generation and management of energy provided from alternative and conventional sources with innovative approaches and methodologies, to the design of propulsion systems and, more generally, to the problems of driving and operating machines. From the point of view of industrial production, the topics are focused on robotics, sensors, unconventional technologies for processing materials, on methods of experimental characterization of materials and mechanical structures, on the design and management of integrated production systems and of the related plants, on logistics, on the design of mechanical systems with innovative approaches also based on vibratory and tribological phenomena. From the point of view of information technologies, the topics are focused on the applications of electromagnetism and propagation, on autonomous systems, on electronics for biometric applications and on telecommunication systems.

Curricula	1. Mediterranean civilizations, institutions and territory 2. Literatures, languages, cultures and knowledge in Mediterranean Europe
Aims and topics	The PhD course aims at providing PhD students with the skills required to high quality research, as a result of a strong integration between "knowledge" and "know-how". The planned three-year course focuses on a plurality of themes, from the theoretical debate to the history of mentalities and thought, literary history, social-economic as well as political-institutional history. The course will enable PhD students to conduct original research at a high scientific level, with a special concern for the analysis of the relations between Southern Italy and other countries and/or areas of European countries in the Mediterranean basin. The interest for the historical dynamics will be accompanied by a special focus on the artistic, linguistic, literary, philosophical, and generally cultural experience. Within both curricula , the PhD student will get, on one hand, the ability to exploit all possible sources for historical reconstruction (historical, archaeological, linguistic, literary, artistic, philosophical, as well as audiovisual documents); moreover, he will learn to consider the intellectual expressions in their historical dimension.
